

Theory Principles: Suffixes

He has a quizzical expression on his face.

This credit card is at the maximum of its limit, and I am making the minimum payment permitted.

Hiring his own daughter for such a plum job was a blatant act of nepotism.

Is alcoholism a physical or mental problem?

His punishment should fit the crime.

How do you deal with his negativism.

He has expressed great skepticism to our success.

They are engaged in a marital dispute involving the children.

She is a journalism major.

We are thinking of incorporating.

We're gratified by your efforts to help us find employment.

That is an unfair comparison.

Will you take these goods on consignment?

She was admitted to the hospital with several abdominal pain.

The settlement check was sent by certified mail.

He's tried in vain to explain the mechanism.